INSIGHT OUT
RAUMINSTALLATION, FRANKFURT, 2018

Insight Out (2018) Frankfurt

Insight Out was on view on 6 and 12 January 2018 as the third episode of the collaboration, in the theatre hall of the Mousonturm. The spatial installation stood in the middle of the black box and was built as a square room within a room, dividing the existing architecture into two areas — a walk-in, multi-walled hybrid of club and sculpture in which people danced for two nights, and an outer space from which the sculpture's architecture and its interior could be viewed. At the centre of the cube, in a further separate room, were the DJ booth and a bar that could only be reached across the dance floor.

The walls of the sculpture were covered with a see-through material that, lit by different light sources, made its layered structure visible from outside. From the inside, however, carefully placed lighting made it impossible to see what lay beyond. This created not only a spatial but also a social division of the black box. Outside the sculpture, one could observe the goings-on within the transparent walls unnoticed, as a voyeur — at its core, one became the object of this gaze oneself.

In Insight Out, YRD.Works exposed not only social constructions but also the technical and structural background of the sculpture. Cables, light sources and support elements borrowed from the theatre's equipment were put on display on the sculpture's outer walls. By staging the theatre technology that usually stays in the background, the installation also made clear its relation to the particular nature of the venue, the theatre. The interior, by contrast, remained free of technical constructions, creating an opposing, white-cube-like situation that was only filled by the presence of visitors.

True to its title, Insight Out used skilful built staging to create a stage for architectural and social reversals that visitors inevitably confronted on entering the installation. The collectives HardWorkSoftDrink and Hotel International provided the music for the two exhibition nights.
