SKULPTUR, NORDHORN, 2019

Doubles (2019) Nordhorn

Following the 2018 Art Prize of the City of Nordhorn, awarded to YRD.Works, Galerie Nordhorn presented a site-specific spatial installation by the collective from 10 March to 5 May 2019.
Especially for the gallery's rooms, the artists developed a spatial sculpture that engages with the existing architecture of the classic white cube and its particularities. At the centre of Doubles is a modular partition system that allows different exhibition situations to be created in the gallery. In an exact one-to-one copy of the original, YRD.Works duplicate the existing partitions in size and material and position them adjacent to the original wall modules in the exhibition space.
The result is a 300 m_2 walk-in course of original and replicated panels that cannot be told apart by their appearance. Only visitors already familiar with Galerie Nordhorn's exhibition architecture may be able to work out which elements were added by the artists and which were already there.

Walter Benjamin's famous concept of the "aura", with which he distinguished original works of art from their technical reproductions more than eighty years ago, is up for negotiation once again in Doubles. Do YRD.Works' artistic replicas carry a different aura, a different presence than the existing exhibition displays? And can one tell the difference between artwork and exhibition design at all? The installation brings the traditional question of the original and its copy into focus and leaves it to visitors to decide how important such a distinction is.
