CANNED (99/63)
AKTION, OFFENBACH / DIGITAL, 2020

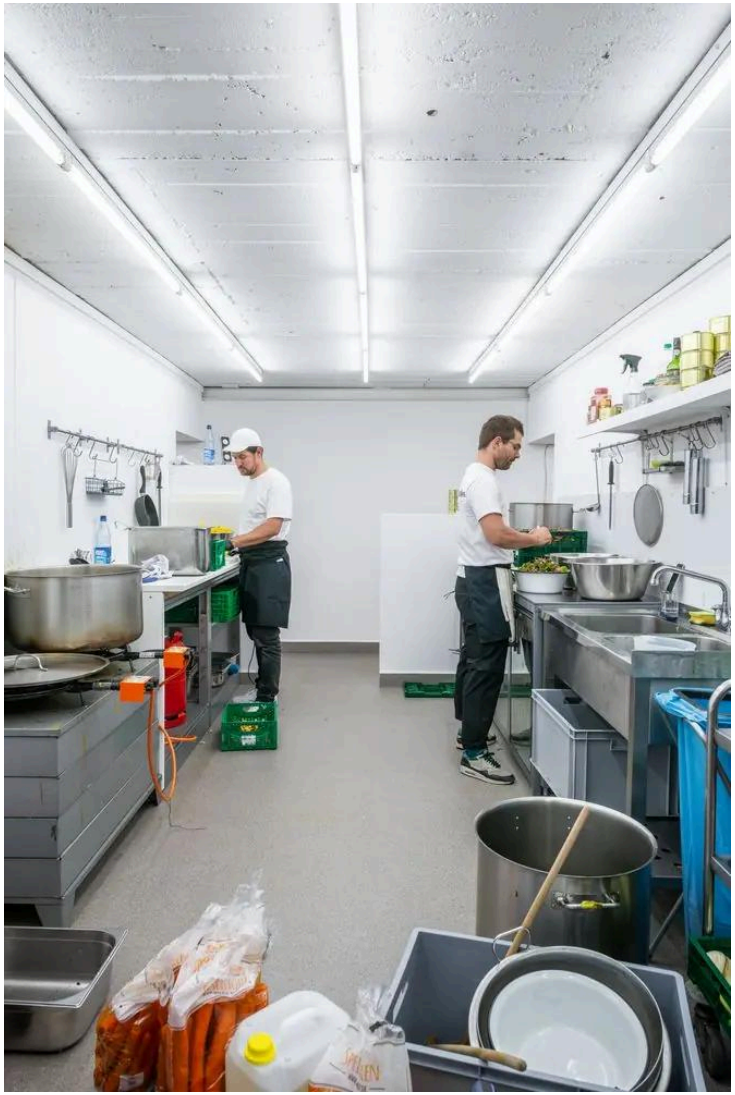

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

A few months before the coronavirus pandemic, YRD.Works and Künstlerhaus Mousonturm had begun planning a project in which regional food was to be preserved in cans. Due to the nationwide lockdown in spring 2020, Canned 99/63 had to be moved into the digital realm at short notice, resulting in a ten-day streaming project. The new, unforeseeable circumstances forced YRD.Works to make some technical changes to the concept, but the original idea had already addressed cultural phenomena such as food prepping and panic buying, which the pandemic pushed further into public focus.

Canned 99/63 was a temporary cannery in which YRD.Works produced up to 200 cans a day with changing dishes. The recipes arose spontaneously from the unsold vegetables and fruit of an organic wholesale market, which could be collected in larger quantities every day. The cooking and canning of the dishes was broadcast live every day on a dedicated website. The production site was divided into three almost identical work areas, filmed from a frontal camera perspective and combined on the website into a digital triptych. The three separate areas each showed one stage of the production process (taking orders, cooking the food and filling the cans) while also referencing the still unfamiliar distancing rules of the first lockdown.

Viewers could intervene in the stream via a telephone hotline and place their orders live, becoming part of the project themselves despite spatial isolation. YRD.Works continuously numbered the gold-coloured cans and shipped them to buyers as a limited edition. The buyers could decide whether to consume the cans as food or keep them as art objects from the action.

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

CANNED (99/63)

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

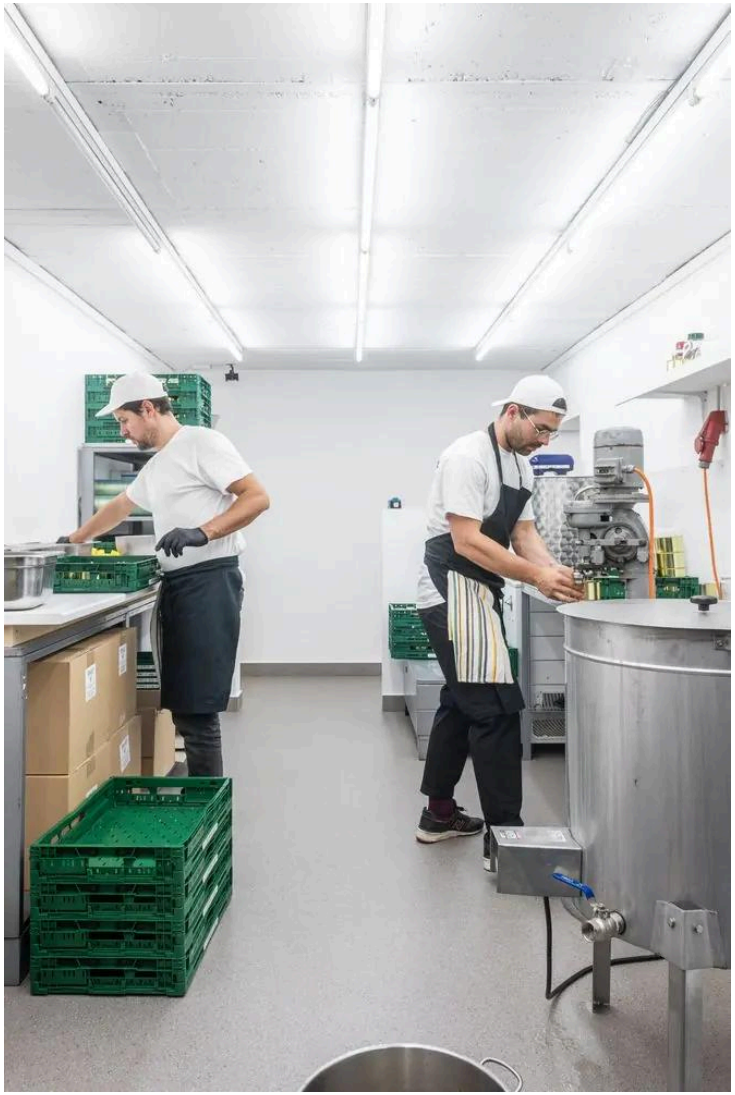

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

CANNED (99/63)

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

CANNED (99/63)

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

CANNED (99/63)

Canned (99/63) (2020) Offenbach / Digital

CANNED (99/63)