INTERVENTION / SKULPTUR / AKTION, DAUERNHEIM / WETTERAU, 2021

Logis (2021) Dauernheim / Wetterau

In the summer of 2020, YRD.Works realised the self-initiated work Logis in a nature reserve in the Wetterau region of Hesse. Over one weekend, a 5 x 5 x 2.5 metre sculpture was erected in which twenty guests then spent the night. The white timber structure consisted of twenty identical sleeping cabins and, with its five storeys, resembled a miniature prefabricated housing block. Positioned on a hilltop amid meadow orchards, the sculpture was visible from afar. Its open sides gave visitors an unobstructed view of the wide valley below the hill. YRD.Works prefabricated the individual parts from recycled materials before the action and then transported them to the Wetterau, so that the artists and their guests could assemble the sleeping place together within a single day. It was part of the artistic concept that visitors were equipped with the necessary tools and actively involved in building Logis. Through collective building and then spending the night together in the object, YRD.Works used Logis to question the boundaries between sculpture, architecture and performative action.
